"Norco gains its name from its location North Corona or North Corona Land Company as it was termed by the city's founder, Rex B. Clark. In the early years, the city was known by a variety of names including: Citrus Belt and Orchard Heights. Norco was incorporated in 1964 and has always been known as an animal-oriented community with over 95 miles of horse trails and 400 acres of horseback riding parkland."

Picture of Walter Knott and Family in front of their "second" berry stand and nursery around 1930, at the corner of Hammer Ave. and Third Street in Norco (where the "Norco Western Town Plaza" is now located). The Knott family grew berries not far away from the stand. The Knott's "second" berry stand in Norco never "took off" like the original Knott's Berry Farm in Buena Park.
